Application of the law of mass action.--Thus far we have only considered the equilibrium which is attained afier the reaction has come to rest, i.e., after the two sides bear a constant relation to one another. The question now arises as to the progress of a reaction toward this state, and the factors upon which the time necessary to attain it depends. By aid of the law of mass action, it is possible to find an answer to both portions of this question. Since chemical action at any time, according to it (p. 238), is proportional, for constant temperature, to the active masses of the substances present, i.e., to those portions which are free to act, then, when we have...
