For his abilities I entertain the highest respect and admiration--admiration equalled only by my respect for his private character. I confirm in every particular the statements made by my right hon friend. My right hon. friend did intimate to his colleagues at an early period, that he thought it improbable he should be enabled to co-operate with them, as a member of the Queen s government, and with the responsibilities and obligations which that situation implies, in the measures they had in contemplation with respect to education in Ireland. If my right hon. friend did not immediately press his resignation, for that I am responsible.
